Wellness coach salary uk

Michael Serva, 34, claims to be Britain's highest-paid life coach After dropping out of school in Poland at 17, Michael Serva took a bus to the UK and lived for two weeks in a squat in south-east London. Now aged 34, and still without any qualifications, he claims to be earning 500,000 pounds a year as a life coach for the rich and famous - and ambitious. His salary far exceeds those recently identified by Indeed, a recruitment site, as paying the highest wages for people leaving education at 18. Personal assistants, the most well-paid roles open to school leavers, earn 27,500 pounds on average while assistant chefs take home just 17,000 pounds. For up to 35,000 pounds a year, Mr Serva's clients receive two weeks of sessions at his Mayfair apartment - where they are working to improve their scores on 25 areas of life - and 24/7 access it via messaging app Whatsapp. Michael Serva charges up to 35,000 pounds a year per person for his services He will not say who his clients are, except that they are highly successful business people. He claims that one is worth 100 million pounds, while the other two have their own views on being presidents of Peru and Ireland, respectively. People at the top of the organization have very few people in their lives who can tell them what they really need to hear. Here I am, a Polish guy who is not intimidated by them and their situation at all. They know they see me on my terms - if they miss the session without telling me they know I will kick them. Mr. Serva compares life coaching to sports training rather than therapy or counseling. We're not dealing with trauma or depression, it's about achieving goals, he says. There is nothing special about me except my attitude - drive and hunger. Everyone can develop these ambitions if they want to. Top 10 highest paid jobs you can get without a university degree He explains how he decided to turn his interest in psychology into a life-coaching business after being turned down for a job in retail after being made redundant. He set up a website and started charging 20 pounds for a two-hour session. Within three months he had 20 clients and he doubled his fee every six to two months. Today, fees run at around 2,000 pounds per session, although it charges a fee for the program, which ranges from 10,000 to 35,000 pounds per year. Sometimes the costs will be repaid by employers' clients, but Mr. Serva says that people on a normal salary should not be put. Currently, life coaches can find intern sessions online on sites such as coachmefree.com. For those who are not convinced that life coaching careers for them, really research also highest-paid jobs that don't require a degree. With thousands of university students racking up fees of 55,000 pounds for a three-year course, traditional living wage increases have previously promised degrees are fading. At the top of the list are construction managers, who earn almost twice the national average wage, at 53,000 pounds a year. Fitness managers (35,000 euros) and pilots (31,500 euros) also do not require although, of course, training will be required.
